at 0400 on Monday 28 Jun 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mainly dry with long clear or sunny spells.

Today:
Early drizzle in coastal north and northwest soon becoming confined to Western and Northern Isles. Otherwise dry and sunny for most, perhaps just the odd isolated afternoon shower over hills.

Tonight:
Some evening cloud around but clear in many places. Generally a clear night around the country however some low cloud will affect the north coastal fringes by dawn. Light winds.

Tuesday:
Central and western parts mainly dry with increasingly warm sunshine. However low cloud and patchy light rain likely across far north and east, perhaps extending westwards through Central Belt overnight.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Staying dry and continuing to feel warm on Wednesday and Thursday. Low cloud less persistent but never far away from the coasts. Perhaps some showers Friday in the east.
